In 2002, the Red Cross and its partners developed and launched a water testing and treatment programme to protect the largest dam in the country. The programme helped provide cleaner and more reliable drinking water for tens of thousands of people living in the five districts that surround the dam. The programme also educated and encouraged the public on the importance of water safety and its connection to malaria prevention.

This was not the first time the public health benefits of malaria prevention had been introduced to the people of the DRC.
