Classic Comlete Series Classic Comlete Series is a turn-based, realistic strategy game that allows players to take command of world war ii using all of the tools of a real world war campaign. Set in a completely historical time line, Strategic Command Classic: WWII allows the user to pick any of the 5 major warring nations in WWII: China, USA, USSR, UK, Germany Build an entire army. All the units and equipment and all the facilities of WWII are represented Alliances are optional, and players can enter the game as both Allies and Axis Full land & naval combat. New map size. Refined game play All units in the game have up to 30 different characteristics and stats 35 different unit types. 350 in-game events. Decision events, which add unpredictability and excitement. Continuous game turn - play or save your game at any time. Very accurate unit graphics and realistic sound. Extensive Modding support. A powerful editor that allows you to add your own image and sound to any event. Strategic Command Classic: World War II will be released with the Gold Edition in March 2008 Newer version eXC's First Release Worst Can Happen Me and DJ Franki, who's a historian and co-writer, have created an altered starting time line to show what America would have done if they had declared war against the U.S.S.R. In the original Strategic Command WWII, there was no nuclear bomb, and also in the original Tactical Command, we had no airfield and a limited number of land resources. I fixed it and I'm quite proud of it. Parts of the campaign will be different, but we're keeping it as close to the original as possible. The Versions 1.01 - the original release of the Gold Edition 1.02 - the newer version, which now changes the way the start of the war was launched, and a couple of other minor changes 1.02.1 - fixes 1.02.2 - fixes 1.02.3 - fixes and bug fixes 1.02.4 - fixes 1.03 - fixes and new features 1.04 - fixes and new features 1.05 - fixes, improvements and new features 1.05.01 - fixes, improvements and new features 1.06 - all new features 1.07 - fixes 1.08 -

In Indiecalypse we'll play as Jack Jackson (programming), Ethan Wornick (music) and Violet Oakly (art), and live their own particular stories. The game's main mechanic is based on modern exploration/adventure games, but Indiecalypse also includes more than 20 mini-games, most of them inspired by well-know indie games. Check them out below! How To Play: 1) Theres lots of minigames and lots of mini-games! Check them out below! 2) Your main job in game is to figure out how to make the game work. Follow the instructions and in the end you'll be able to control Ethan (music), Jack (programming) and Violet (art)! 3) You can explore lots of different maps like the ones below, with the help of many items! 4) You can choose if you want to see a cutscene, or just explore the game's environment. Some environments are easier to explore than others. 5) Pressing the "move" key will pause the game, press the space bar to move slowly and the right arrow key to move fast. 6) Play the music in the music editor. 7) You can change the music using the "+" and "-" keys. 8) You can adjust the volume using the right arrow key. 9) Use the space bar to save. Press the "~" key to load. 10) Use the arrows keys to scroll through the save files. 11) Pressing the "1" key will set "Victory" as a game mode, and "0" as a normal mode. 12) Use the "X" button to quit to menu. Press "Y" to display the back menu. 13) Once you've found a way to control Ethan, Jack and Violet and are about to be lynched by a mob of angry indie developers, you'll be able to interact with the environment using the keyboard. 14) Press the space bar to have an arrow appear on-screen. Press the right arrow to aim and the left arrow to fire. 15) To hold the fire, simply press the right arrow key, or press the "0" key to release it and return to fire. 16) Use the up arrow key to bring back the crosshairs. 17) Aim with the is a general purpose time aid, designed to suit all kinds of organisations. 2. Current version web site the application, and the associated support materials and 1.0.1 release are available on github for those who would like to get involved. This and future versions will be updated on the nexus site. You can also find documentation and examples there. the latest version is known to work with wink and the webops team are working on integrating nanoc 3. How does it work? this page describes the overall design, and it will look like this at the end... The application fits into the Organisation Ontology framework. Within this you will be able to define the organisational structure in the way that you like, details will be explained later. The application is based on the time framework described in Jargonz. The time model is the main component of this package. The model used in Exanima is based on the Resource time specification (rfc 3161) - a recent and up-to-date version can be found in JargonZ. One of the basic problems with a closed specification is that it is difficult to ensure that another computer will be able to read and work with it, for more information have a look in the time section on wikipedia. 4. Time four components of time are used to describe the units and the values, and these will define the time axis. The default setting of an organisation is: days = 24*60*60 seconds = 60*60 minutes = 60 seconds = 0 There is no concept of timekeeper for employees so if an employee is on sick leave, leave of absence or otherwise disturbed then he may not be around to define a unit of time. This default setting can be customized for a particular use case, within one hours scope the minimum time unit of a day will change. Most applications do not play around with the time scale - so think of it as being a part of your organisation. 5. Time organisations The time organisation has two different ways of defining the organisation structure. Most users will use the terminology ontology, which will give a hierarchical organisation structure. This can be highly useful for specific organisational structuring. In exanima we have a number of pre-configured time organisations where the structure is
