The court ordered the company to continue operating for a year and maintain its lists of creditors and other information, and then expects to confirm a reorganization plan. By filing, Peer 1, a New Jersey-based airline that serves United Kingdom, Europe and North Africa, has lost its ability to fly for customers and should remain in operation as a going concern. A Chapter 11 filing adds a liquidating chapter to the business, but does not bring it to an end. It is less costly to reorganize the company than liquidate it because the company can continue operating. "It's been a horrific year for the airline, and not just for the airline," said Ryan Hamel, a bankruptcy expert. "The airline's marketing is terrible," he said, "and it's losing money. It was going to file for Chapter 11 no matter what, it just delayed its filing by a month or two." Peer 1 has some support in the aviation community, Hamel said. "The creditors do support this and will work to support this, and the support is mostly from the airline's employees," he said. He expects a reorganization plan to be approved within a few months. There are no payments to creditors at the time of filing, since all debts were secured by the airline's assets. "The creditors do not want to see the airline go out of business," Hamel said. Peer 1 has been the victim of an unprecedented hard landing in its business, Hamel said. The airline had secured substantial investment to fund an expansion, but was unable to fulfill their contractual obligations. "Some creditors foreclosed Ultrasonography in the evaluation of neonatal seizures. The objective of this study was to test the diagnostic accuracy of a transcranial Doppler ultrasound (TCD) in differentiating neonatal seizures from neonatal periods, by testing its ability to correctly identify the etiology of neonatal seizures. A total of 105 neonates consecutively admitted for seizure and observed with video-EEG recordings were included, being 57 of them with a confirmed diagnosis. TCD studies were performed by transfontal transducer. Patients with cryptogenic seizures, before a diagnosis was finally established were excluded. At admission, the same TCD exam was performed on each neonate in terms of the presence of discrete or continuous background flow, assessment of the opening, presence of abnormal, and turbulence of flow. TCD was a positive test for the diagnosis of neonatal seizure in 20/21 (95.2%) of the cases, with a sensitivity of 94.8% (95% CI: 88.2-98.7%) and a specificity of 100% (95% CI: 92.7-100%). The positive and negative predictive value of this test were 100% and 91.2% (95% CI: 80.7-96.7%), respectively. TCD is a highly sensitive and specific tool for screening neonatal seizures, which could be a useful tool in the inpatient setting. + 4 0 7 * m - 6 . W h a t i s l * k (v) + 7 * j (Occ13bf012
