The lighthouse is owned by the Commissioners of Irish Lights and managed by the Irish Lights. The seas around Inishbofin Island are notorious for the frequency and intensity of their storms, including the notorious 'sorrowful' sea. Inishbofin is located in the Atlantic at the extreme western tip of Ireland, and can be reached by ferry. History The lighthouse was built in 1902 to replace the original wooden lighthouse which was built by the Commissioners of Irish Lights in 1805. The first recorded incident involving the beacon occurred in 1834, when a storm broke a lantern on the third storey. In 1852, the lantern and the third storey were rebuilt. A new lighthouse was required in the 1870s due to severe erosion which was eroding the original reef from which the original 1805 wooden lighthouse had been constructed. In 1974, it was decided that the original lighthouse would have to be removed, and in 1978, it was successfully removed by a team of local people. The reef that it had been built on was subsequently planted with exotic blue-green seaweed, to give the reef the look of a reef. The second storey was replaced in 1989 and the lantern in 2004. It is now taller than its predecessor, with both an inner and outer gallery and an adjacent building. See also List of lighthouses in Ireland References External links

Is it possible to hide/disable/remove the marker's added indicator? I want it to stay hidden but I don't want to remove the info windows. My map has state and counties and markers are assigned to a county, then state, then the counties there are thus many. I just want the users to see the states and counties if they mouse over a state. A: See the Events and Methods section of the documentation for more options. Here's one solution, which listens for mouse events on the map, and uses get('visible') to see if the marker is visible: google.maps.event.addListener(map,'mouseover', function(event) { var infoWindow = map.get('infoWindow'); if (infoWindow) { infoWindow.close(); } if (event.latLng) { var marker = new google.maps.Marker({ map: map, position: event.latLng, visible: map.get('visible') 6d1f23a050
